

Security

North East Computer Systems Ltd can perform a comprehensive Security Audit at your site, supplied with a full report. You may already be at risk!

At N.E.C.S. Security Solutions we specialise in all aspects of computer and network security. The problems are vast in an ever growing environment of computer hacking and industrial espionage, coupled with the threat of terrorism. To be secure means employing every available resource, but do you know of the threats and the countermeasures?

The threats we face today can't be seen or heard and may also come from within your own company. Without the knowledge and skills to fight an unseen enemy how long do you think you can last before your business is compromised?

Businesses store information in both computer and paper-based systems. Whichever method you use, keeping your data secure and confidential will help safeguard the information you need to run your business successfully and ensure you comply with relevant legislation.

If your business data is lost, misused or accessed without authorisation, it can be difficult to make informed business decisions. This can also put you at a competitive disadvantage to your rivals.

There are a variety of risks associated with storing information - especially on a computer, which can have a potentially damaging impact on your business. A loss of data whether through human error, fire, theft or other event will, at a minimum, require additional effort in collecting and reproducing the information. It can also have more serious consequences.
